Given a Turing machine M , and a word w . w is accepted by M iff M halts on w and halts on no input Proof. It is known that for any non-halting Turing machine M there exists a word w for which M does not halt on w . Let M be such a Turing machine, let w be a word such that M does not halt on w , and suppose M halts on input w . Then by definition of being a Turing machine, M will halt on some other input $w' = w$. Since w is not accepted, w' is accepted. But that contradicts the definition of w . Therefore M does not halt on input w . \blacksquare By contraposition, if M halts on w , and none
